

CAR RUNS WILD HALF A MILE.

CONTROLLER JAMMED AND MOTORIST COULDN'T STOP.

started at 100th street and Amsterdam Avenue and left the tracks at 110th street. Passengers badly frightened, but only one was much injured.

The controller of a "combination" car of the Sixth and Amsterdam Avenue line got jammed at 100th street and Amsterdam Avenue at 10:30 o'clock last night and the car ran wild. It was pretty well filled with passengers and the controller, Bartley Cavanagh, of 30 West Sixty-third street, had stopped at 100th street to let off a passenger. When he started the car again he pulled the controlling lever to the third notch, a fair speed. Then he found that the controller was jammed and he could not work it any more.

He signalled to the conductor and at 100th street there is a switch. The conductor signalled to the switchman by waving his arms, that the car was running wild and could not be stopped. The switchman understood him and fixed the switch so that the car would run into 100th street toward Columbus Avenue.

The car continued to Columbus Avenue and took the switch there without any mishap. It went straight ahead up Columbus Avenue where the car ran on a blind track and went for switching purposes. At 110th street the car ran onto one of these tracks and off, striking the cobblestones. Then it stopped.

The passengers on the car were badly scared. They thought the car was coming to a stop. Then they found out that the car was running wild and that the controller was jammed. They were all crowded into the car and the car was running fast. The women on the car began to scream and the men on the car started to run. The car was running so fast that it was impossible to stop it. It was running so fast that it was impossible to stop it.

When the car ran off the tracks at 110th street the motorist touched the brake clamp with his foot, releasing the brake. It swung around with great velocity striking him on the ribs and knocking him up against the dashboard. The car bumped along the cobblestones for some ten feet, throwing the passengers about. Then it stopped. One of them, Elizabeth Cavanagh, 42 years old, of 137 West Twenty-fourth street, struck the seat in front of her with such force that one of her ribs was broken. Several of the other passengers received slight bruises and cuts. An ambulance was called from the J. Hood Wright Hospital and Dr. K. H. Kline, of the hospital, attended to the injured. The motorist and Mrs. Cavanagh to the hospital. The car was pretty badly damaged, the windows in the front part having been smashed when the car bumped on the cobblestones.

EX-FIREMAN ROBBED OF $195.

His Car Was Held Up on the Street by a Man Who Saw Him Show the Money.

James Reynolds, who says he is a miner living in Yonkers, was held in $5,000 bail by Magistrate Mott in the Harlem police court yesterday, charged with highway robbery. Reynolds was arrested on the complaint of Edward Tierney, an ex-fireman of 300 Willis Avenue.

Tierney says that on Friday night he was seated in the rear room of a saloon on Amsterdam Avenue and showed $195 in bills. Reynolds, he says, was sitting near him and grabbed the money. The bartender and Tierney kicked Reynolds out of the place. Sometime later Tierney says he left the saloon and walked toward the city hall. He was followed by a man who was attacked by two men, one of whom was Reynolds. They knocked him down and took the money from him.

Tierney complained to the West 125th street police and Detectives Mangin and Maguire arrested Reynolds yesterday morning.

DRY IN DONOVAN'S PRESENT.

The New Captain Tells His Men to Enforce, Not Interpret the Law.

Capt. James Donovan, one of the captains recently appointed by Commissioner Partridge, kept the West Twentieth street precinct dry yesterday. When he turned out his men at midnight Saturday he told them that they wanted the law enforced and then added significantly:

"It is your duty to enforce the law and not to interpret it."

The tip was soon passed around the precinct and most of the saloons shut their doors. Eight saloons were arrested. This is probably the largest number of saloons that have been shut in this precinct in one day in years.

Capt. Donovan has been a long time in charge of the House of Detention, and is regarded as one of the best Deputy Commissioners Donovan's friends.

FOUR KILLED IN A FEUD.

The Shackelfords Attack the Hoppers at Early Daylight.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 22.—Another feud is on in the mountain section near Middleboro, Ky., and four combatants were killed today. The clan Shackelford and Luke Hopper factions are again at war. Shortly after the famous Quarter House saloon of Lee Turner was burned Tom and Henry Shackelford, brothers, started a saloon of the same kind on Cabin Fork. Luke Hopper and James Miller then opened a moonshine still some distance away. This was the beginning of hostilities between the Shackelford and Hopper families.

Authentic details are unobtainable as the mountaineers are afraid to talk. A Middleboro citizen who passed that way from Mingo mines says the Shackelfords planned an attack on Hopper's saloon, coming to this determination after a night of carousal. The attack was made this morning at 4 o'clock. The Hopper men were expecting the attack and fired first.

Henry Shackelford fell dead at the first firing. Later his brother and two of his men were killed, and Sam, Overton of the Hopper men was mortally wounded. A hundred shots were exchanged and then the Shackelfords retired. Luke Hopper is a son of Tom Hopper, who was shot seven times at the Quarter House battle.

DOG BITES TWO CHILDREN.

Nips a Horse and Seizes Man Persons in Dyker Heights Section.

A long-eared, scraggy-looking black dog ran amok in the Dyker Heights section of Port Hamilton yesterday afternoon, snarling everybody in sight and biting two children and a horse.

When the animal was first seen a crowd of small boys set up the cry of "Mad dog!" The dog, followed by the boys, ran down Seventy-ninth street until it met two women who were passing on bicycles. The dog ran plump into one of the wheels, upsetting the young woman who was riding it.

The women became hysterical, and were carried into the home of Mrs. Annie Decker at Seventy-ninth street and Tenth Avenue, where, after becoming composed, they recounted their wheels and rode off. After knocking over the bicycle and its rider the dog ran down to Ninetieth street and Fourth Avenue, where boys were playing baseball. The dog snarled at John Warren, 8 years old, taking a nip out of his right leg. May Finley, 6 years old, next got in the way of the dog and was bitten in the right arm.

Then the dog ran down Port Hamilton Avenue. A man and woman were riding in a buggy, and the dog started after them. He gripped the horse by the right leg, but the horse shook him off and the driver beat the dog off with his whip. At Eighty-sixth street the dog ran into James Cunningham's house, which is on Port Hamilton Avenue. Mr. Cunningham, his wife and seven children were at dinner. The dog crawled under the table, and, apparently satisfied that he had done enough damage, kept quiet. Mr. Cunningham and his family very much frightened, abandoned their dinner and ran out of the house. Several of the children got Policeman Bryan, who shot the dog.

FELL FROM FOOTBOARD.

John Hendt's Wife Went on Without Knowing His Arm Had Been Cut Off.

Thomas McCue, a motorman on a Sea Beach trolley car, noticed a man lying beside the track near the bridge over Conely Avenue. He ran to the man and found his car and found that the man was unconscious. His right arm had been cut off near the shoulder and he was badly bruised.

There was a big crowd on the car, and the incident created a good deal of excitement. The passengers insisted that the motorist should stop the car and take the man to a hospital. The motorist ran to the West 125th street police and Detectives Mangin and Maguire arrested Reynolds yesterday morning.

FIRECRACKER FACTORY BURNS.

Three Hours of Unprecedented Hanging at West Hanover, Mass.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., June 22.—The main building of the National Fireworks Company at West Hanover, with all the machinery and stock, was destroyed today. The company manufactures firecrackers of all sizes. Fire started under the shipping room, where 2,000 cases were stored. The fire was not observed until an explosion occurred. For the next three hours there was a noise that put Fourth of July to shame. The flames spread to another large building full of crackers, but the magazine, containing tons of explosives, was not burned. After the fire had burned for six hours there was a tremendous explosion that drove every one away from the neighborhood. The loss is estimated at $100,000. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

The building was known as the Forster and Sons' factory and was built in 1710. In it were stored many of the old Revolutionary War weapons and the anchors for "Old Ironsides" were also made there.

A PICTURESCQUE PASTIME.

Mr. Ryer Lights Newspapers, Throws Them Up and Shoots at Them.

Henry Ryer of 2 Bartlett street, Brooklyn, went home late on Saturday night, removed from his chair a large bundle of newspapers and a revolver. There he lit the papers one by one, threw them into the air and amused himself by shooting at them.

One of his bullets struck the ground near the house of 139 Haverock street. He called two policemen, who chased Ryer into his room and tried to arrest him. Ryer is a big, husky man, and the two policemen couldn't do anything with him, so they sent for help. He was finally cornered and tied up with cords by seven policemen and taken to the City street station.

Yesterday morning he was sent to the Kings County Hospital, a prisoner, to be treated for delirium tremens.

Stray Bullet Wounds Laura Jenkins—No Trace of the Shooter.

Roundsman Fennel of the West Sixty-eighth street station was standing at Sixty-ninth street and West End Avenue last evening when he heard a pistol shot followed immediately by the screams of a woman. Hurrying in the direction of the sounds, he met Laura Jenkins of 306 West Sixty-ninth street rushing along the street.

She told him that she was sitting on the stoop of her house when she heard a revolver shot and then felt a stinging sensation in her arm. She found she had been shot. Fennel could not find the shooter. She received only a slight flesh wound.

CHOLERA IS NOT CHECKED.

SPREADS IN AN ALARMING MANNER IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Province of Laguna de Bay, South of Manila, Suffering Severely From Epidemic. The Quarantine at Port of Callao Established—Assessors Captured.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.

MANILA, June 22.—Despite the rigid precautions adopted by the authorities and the heroic work of the civil and military doctors, the cholera in the provinces is spreading in an alarming manner. Yesterday 242 deaths from the disease were reported, and there were undoubtedly many other deaths that did not come to the knowledge of the authorities.

The province of Laguna de Bay is suffering heavily from the epidemic. The burial of the victims has been abandoned, and the corpses are not cremated. The port on Laguna de Bay have again established a quarantine against homebound bound soldiers, and the detention camp at Manila has also been reestablished.

HAVRE, June 22.—The United States cruiser Chicago arrived here today.

NO HARVARD COMMENT.

What Will Be the Effect of Mayor McNamee's Snailpox Order?

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 22.—The citizens of this city are questioning if under the order issued by Mayor McNamee closing all churches, halls, and other places where the people may congregate, on account of snailpox, the commencement exercises at Harvard can be held.

The order was generally obeyed, but with the Radcliffe students it was different. Arrangements had been made for the Harvard commencement to be held at the Radcliffe church in the First Congregational Church this afternoon. Miss Irwin, dean of the college, desired to carry the plan through and spoke to Bishop Lawrence about Mayor McNamee's order. The latter called up Dr. Walcott, chairman of the State Board of Health, on the telephone, and then talked with the local officials. They all advised him that Mr. McNamee could not force the churches to close.

Then the Mayor was called and he said at first that he would send policemen to prevent the people from entering any church where snailpox was known to be present. He then changed his mind and said that he would send policemen to prevent the people from entering any church where snailpox was known to be present.

The annual commencement prayer service followed the sermon. There was held this afternoon. It was led, as usual by Dr. Robert Russell Booth, '09, of New York. LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN.

A Matrimonial whose business it is to inform himself on the subject recently came to the conclusion that the present supply of rooms in the New York hotels was 500 less than it ought to be. In spite of the number of hotels recently put up that many are needed to bring the supply up to the demand.

These figures are not the result of an investigation of the subject made when the city is crowded during the week of the Horse Show, for instance, when all the available space in the hotels is occupied—but represents conditions that prevail during the regular season. It may be seen that the opportunities for hotel enterprise are by no means exhausted. The extent to which they may continue to be built, moreover, is shown by the belief among interested men that every new hotel built benefits those already in existence. The extent to which they may continue to be built, moreover, is shown by the belief among interested men that every new hotel built benefits those already in existence.

It must also be a little bit hard for the proprietor of the old-fashioned hotel who sees his former patrons attracted by newer establishments into the city and compelled to close up or into bankruptcy to realize just how the new places are of benefit to him.

Fritz Kreisler, the Austrian violinist, who has just invited his New York friends to his wedding in Moscow, was more of a matinee idol last winter than any other fiddler who has been here in recent years. The enthusiasm of some of his admirers occasionally broke out at the Kubelick recitals, and that was of a peculiar character of its own, since the youthful Bohemian most frequently awakened these outbursts in the case of women who were old enough to be his mother.

Frederic, who was, on the other hand, athletic and vigorous to the point of brutality, was admired by the feminine part of his audience in much the same way that Hackett, Faversham and Northern are, and this is quite another kind of an interest from that the musician usually inspires.

Two of the literary lights of the Montmartre quarter of Paris are expected to come to this city during the summer and it will be interesting to see the extent to which these two literary Parisian notabilities are appreciated here.

Lucien Boyer and Suma Bles are the two Montmartre poets who have decided to come here. One is very tall and the other very short, which is a circumstance in itself. They are both of the same age, and they have both been several years in the city. They will follow their Paris custom of composing and singing their poems on various subjects of city life. One of the bachelor dinners held the other night at a restaurant on Fifth Avenue was enlivened by one feature that is rarely a part of these gatherings, however elaborate they may be. In addition to the flowers in the centre of the large table that was surrounded by the twenty guests, were twenty flower baskets, smaller than the principal decoration of the table.

After the dinner had progressed to a certain point, a procession of messenger boys, each carrying a new uniform, entered the room. As they marched around the table, one came to a halt behind every guest. They then gave each guest a new uniform. As they marched around the table, one came to a halt behind every guest. The bringing picture school of advertising would seem to have no limit to the length to which the advantages of a tooth wash must be made known to the public by means of the spectacle to be seen now in the windows of a downtown drug store. There sits a young woman with some claims to beauty, but looking somewhat smaller than concentrated in a beautiful set of teeth. On a table in front of her are a can of tooth powder and the other requisites to attaining successfully to that detail of the toilet.

At intervals she entertains the crowd that gathers in front of the window by clearing her teeth, which she would in the privacy of her own room, if she were there. But this scene in a show window on the principal street of the city, before a crowd of gawking passers-by, is a much more effective advertisement than any she could give herself.

FIGHT FOLLOWS EXCISE RAID.

Capt. Creedon and His Men Have a Lively Time Closing a Saloon.

Capt. Timothy Creedon of the East Eighty-eighth street station and five of his detectives had a rough time yesterday morning in making an excise arrest at Eighty-fourth street and Second Avenue in the saloon of Sylvester Burnheimer.

The captain and his men started out at midnight to make a tour of the precinct. When they came to Burnheimer's place it was crowded with men. The captain and his detectives forced their way into the inside and ordered the men to get out.

They at first refused to go but when threatened with arrest started to leave. As the men were going out some of them to the detectives. "Well, don't rob the till" other remarks were made and August Moenel of 331 East Eighty-first street and his brother, Fred, who was working in the saloon, were particularly noisy, were arrested. Detective McAuley grabbed Moenel and William Creedon followed. Green struck William in the face and knocked him down. William soon got to his feet and pulled his revolver. He aimed at the crowd and pulled the trigger, but the weapon didn't go off.

Capt. Creedon yelled to him to put up his revolver and he and his men with their clubs soon took the fight out of the men. Moenel and Green were fined $1 each for disorderly conduct before Magistrate Mott in the Harlem police court.

SUNDAY SCARE IN BRIDGEPORT.

Over the Grand Republic, Which Hadn't Done a Thing to Deserve It.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 22.—Rumors of an accident, coupled with the fact that the vessel was a little late in returning to this city, caused a great commotion here to-night among the relatives and friends of 2,500 excursionists of the St. Joseph's Temperance and Literary Association, who made a trip to New York and Conny Island today on the steamer Grand Republic.

Appeals from the parents of young people aboard the boat for information exercised the Police Department. Hundreds thronged the piers along the water front and waited for
